Lara Logan: Dropping Truth Bombs on the Deep State

Rumble: June 4, 2022

Good Evening and Welcome. For those of you that don't know I have been a journalist for more than 35 years, since I was 17. I started in South Africa and spent most of my career at CBS News and 60 Minutes, but worked actually in newspapers and Radio, at NBC, at ABC... you can pretty much name it. As much as they want to deny it, I have won many, many, many awards for my work over the years. Which is an inconvenient truth now. They want to paint me as the darling of the far, far, alt-right now. I've gone from just being the darling of the right, to the darling of the extreme far right.

Do you know what qualified you as the extreme far right today? Probably a lot of you in this room right now. If you Care about what your children learn about in school, or you are curious about the election results, or you want the truth about COVID, and whether we should or shouldn't know everything related to that. All of those things today qualify you as a domestic terrorist. That part you're all familiar with.

The question then becomes 'What does it mean? Where are we in this moment and where is it taking us?' And that is pretty much why I am here this evening. You have a candidate like Ross who is the bravest man in the room since he invited me down here. I did warn him in advance that I wasn't part of his campaign. So if he wanted a sycophant to just blow smoke up his butt, he was calling on the wrong person. Sorry, did I mention my destructive gene? The ground rules were well established in advance.

Political events were never something I would ever have done because I didn't need to. It wasn't the place of a journalist to do political events and it wasn't something that I would ever have considered. So how did I end up here?

Well, it's interesting because I realized that there are many forms of censorship. One of the most powerful forms of censorship today, is to just deny the existence of most people in this country. If you want to see a metaphor for that look at the two words 'flyover states.' What do people learn about the history of Charleston, SC? What are we told about that? What do people all over the world in countries like South Africa, where Andre and I grew up, or in Europe, or anywhere. What did they learn about the United States?

They don't learn about the glory age of the Pirates in Charleston, right?

And Charles Vain, Edward Teach, Blackbeard and all the others. They don't learn about the spirit of resistance. They learn only about racism. They are learning a new history. And the new history is not an honest history. It's a political restructuring of reality in order to achieve a political outcome. And every part of my body revolts against that. I like to know exactly where I stand. I am not a gray area kind of person. I can recognize the gray area, but my bullshit meter is much stronger than anything else. That's what I was born with. Injustice was never something I was going to just sit there and watch injustice and keep my mouth shut. That was just never going to happen.

Hunter Biden's firm helped China gain control of electric-car mineral: report

Hunter Biden's investment firm helped broker a 2016 deal that gave a Chinese state-backed company control of a massive African mine rich in cobalt — a mineral essential for the production of electric car batteries.

The deal, first reported by the Washington Free Beacon during the 2020 presidential campaign, was spotlighted by the New York Times Saturday as Congress inches closer to approving President Biden's $2 trillion social spending plan, which earmarks billions of dollars to promote electric vehicles.

In 2016, an investment firm founded by Hunter Biden with several Chinese partners was cut into a complex $3.8 billion transaction that transferred 80 percent of Congo's Tenke Fungurum mine from an American company to Beijing-backed China Molybdenum.

President Joe Biden, Hunter Biden's father, was the sitting vice president when the deal was struck. The mine is one of the world's largest sources of cobalt — and China's control of the mineral "presents a critical vulnerability to the future of the U.S. domestic auto industry," Biden's White House reported in June.

A White House spokesman said that Joe Biden had no knowledge of his son's involvement with the sale, the Times reported.

WASHINGTON STATE SCHOOL BOARD DIRECTOR OFFERS SEX ED TO CHILDREN

By Eric Utter; July 11, 2022

Jenn Mason, a Washington state school board director, is advertising summer "sex education" workshops for children as young as 9...to be held at the WinkWink Boutique, the "all ages sex toy shop" that she owns.

As originally reported by Breitbart, WinkWink is "a woman-owned sex shop delighting in expertly curated sex and body products, lingerie, and books," which is listing two sex ed workshops on an event booking platform. The workshops, which are being officially run by the "Underage Academy" "Uncringe Academy," a spinoff of Mason's WinkWink, are being billed as "honest, supportive, and inclusive sex education classes to help young people of all genders and sexual identities understand this important part of their life."

In addition to owning the sex shop, Mason is also a (self-proclaimed) "sex educator." The two three-hour workshops will be held over a span of three days. One will be for children ages 9–12, the other for those 13–18. Mason avers that "presentation of topics will vary for developmental appropriateness." Topics will include:

- The science of puberty
- Gender and sexual identities
- Sexual anatomy for pleasure and reproduction
- What IS sex? Kinds of solo and partnered sexual activities
- Safer sex practices for all kinds of sexual activities
- The ethics and realities of sexualized media and pornography

Mason is a staunch LGBT advocate and abortion proponent who has a history of offering such classes to under-18s. In fact, she recently held "Queer Youth Open Mic Night," a class touted as being for "all queer youth (0 to 18 years old)" at her sex shop.

"0" years old?! I would think progressives would be confused as to whether to abort these pre-born or just born babies, inject them with Pfizer's new COVID-1984 vaccine, convince them they are gay, or start them on a trans regimen. In any case, I wouldn't expect them to speak on "Open Mic Night."

In an email interview with a local radio station host, Mason explained, "There's no such thing as 'real' sex, and it's okay if your definition of sex is different from someone else's." Did Bill Clinton graduate from "~~Unhinged Academy~~" "Uncringe Academy"?

"What IS sex?" Well, there are "all kinds of sexual activities," and they are all equal, just as there are all kinds of genders. And remember, kiddies, there's no such thing as "real" sex.

THREE DOCTORS From the Same Hospital "Die Suddenly" in the Same Week After Hospital Mandates Fourth COVID Shot

By Jim Hoft
Published July 28, 2022 at 6:55pm

Three physicians at Canada's Trillium Health Partners-Mississauga Hospital died unexpectedly in the same week. The cause of death for the three doctors has yet to be announced.

The news about the three deceased doctors was first shared by independent journalist Monique in a post that went viral. According to Monique, a concerned nurse shared with her a copy of the memo that was sent out by the hospital's management.

According to the nurse, the three doctors died after the hospital started mandating the fourth Covid shot for their employees.

"Three physicians at the Mississauga hospitals have died this week," the nurse told Monique. "1st memo Monday, 2nd Tuesday, 3rd Thursday. [The] cause of death wasn't shared in the memo, but how many times have 3 doctors died in 1 week, days after the hospital started administering the 4th shot to staff."

Health Care Workers Who Sued Over COVID-19 Vaccine Mandate Win $10 Million Settlement

By John Symank, July 29, 2022

A group of health-care professionals who sued their hospital after they alleged that the hospital illegally refused to issue religious exemptions for the COVID-19 vaccine mandate will receive over $10 million in a settlement filed on July 29.

Approximately 14 workers filed the suit against NorthShore University HealthSystem in Illinois last October. After eight months of negotiations, the workers and NorthShore “have agreed to settle this case,” according to the settle-

Under the settlement’s terms, NorthShore will pay $10,337,500 into a settlement fund for workers affected by its mandate — specifically, workers who between July 1, 2021, and Jan. 1, 2022, requested a religious exemption for the mandate and were denied, then either received a vaccine to avoid termination or were fired or resigned. Approximately 473 workers were affected by the mandate.

NorthShore will also adjust its vaccine mandate “to enhance its accommodation procedures for individuals with approved exemptions for sincerely held religious belief.”

Any worker who was fired because they refused to vaccinate are invited to apply for reemployment.

Liberty Counsel, the legal group representing the workers, considered it the first-of-its-kind settlement for action against a private employer who denied hundreds of requests for religious exemptions.

“The drastic policy change and substantial monetary relief required by the settlement will bring a strong measure of justice to NorthShore’s employees who were callously forced to choose between their conscience and their jobs,” Horatio Mihet, vice president of legal affairs at the group, said in a statement.

“This settlement should also serve as a strong warning to employers across the nation that they cannot refuse to accommodate those with sincere religious objections to forced vaccination mandates,” he added.

In all, workers who received the vaccine after their exemption was denied will each receive approximately $3,000, and workers who were fired for refusing to get the vaccine could receive up to $25,000.

The suit also set aside $260,000 specifically for the workers who lodged the suit, and each of them could receive an additional $20,000 from that.

Liberty Counsel is also asking for approximately 20% in attorney fees, or around $2 million.

The Democrats have become the party of miserable, whiny grumps

When Elon Musk tweet-ed on Friday, “The far left

A perfect mascot for liberal misery.

Similarly at The Washington Post, columnist Kate Cohen wrote Wednesday how awful it is to see Americans ditching their masks in celebration. “I still planned to wear a mask while COVID circulated in my community because I was afraid of spreading the virus to vulnerable people,” she said. “Surely we can personally be ‘done’ with this pandemic while respecting the fact that others are not.”

It's not just COVID

What she means is something more along the lines of: I don't like that I can't morally nag people about masks without the backing of the State anymore.

After all, there's nothing liberals love to do anymore these days than nag. Stay home! Mask up!

Follow the science! All of them slogans of the forever angry Left.

Their bitterness isn't exclusive to COVID. It's everywhere. The worst of it is seen on matters of race and sexual identity.

Virginia Gov. Glenn Youngkin wouldn't be so hated by the left if he hadn't put a spotlight on public schools that were teaching students that to be white is to be irredeemably awful. Florida wouldn't be at the center of controversy right now if it weren't for liberals believing it is their constitutional right to explain to kindergarteners who aren't theirs what it means to be trans.

Those are just the big policy fights. They're willing to make everyone uncomfortable in small encounters as well. Not a single person reading this hasn't experienced the angry entitlement of a liberal in social settings. They speak on political and cultural controversies with presumed impunity, certain that whatever they have to say is shared by everyone present, and if it's not, you're the problem for failing to agree.

Don't believe in vaccine mandates? They'll get in your face. Not a fan of defunding the police? They'll call you a racist. Opposed to transgender kids being loaded up with puberty blockers? They'll suck all the joy out of the room without any sense of shame whatsoever.

Normal people avoid conflict. Liberals desperately search for it. All the time.

Elon Musk is on the right track about liberals being hateful. He just doesn't realize how vast that hatred is.

Former Social Justice Warrior Overcomes Fear to Speak Up

By RTM Staff, June 14, 2022

For Keri Smith, deprogramming from what she calls the cult of wokeism didn't happen overnight.

But the behavior of her former friends within the social-justice world during the 2016 presidential election, with their support of violence, censorship, and gaslighting, certainly sped up the process, setting off a parade of red flags.

Social-justice warriors (SJW) were advocating for acts of aggression against supporters of former President Donald Trump, contradicting what she said she understood the essential nature of liberalism to be.

"It was the first indication that I might not really understand what was going on in the world," Smith told The Epoch Times.

Today, Smith fosters conversations with guests on her YouTube channel, Deprogrammed with Keri Smith, to examine and unpack the SJW belief system and its permeation into all spheres of power and influence, including pop culture.

"I want to understand the belief system better for myself, to untangle all of it," she said. "What did I believe about it that was true? What did I believe about it that was false?"

Approaching the topic from all angles, Smith interviews a range of people, including comedians, artists, academic scholars, and authors, as well as others like her who have abandoned their wokist ideologies to hear their stories.

Smith said she first encountered social-justice theories in the late 90s when she was a biological anthropology and anatomy major, with a minor in women's studies, at Duke University in Durham, North Carolina, when most people hadn't heard of critical race theory.

She also worked with Amnesty International, the international non-governmental human rights organization, which held a seminar on "dismantling racism," she said.

"These have become very common nowadays," she said. "We learn the new concepts they push, like 'racism and sexism are prejudice plus power.' Looking back on it now, I realize what was happening was that this was a belief system that I was getting pulled into. But at the time, it didn't seem like a belief system; it seemed like progressivism. I thought I was learning how the world works and learning how to end oppression."

But slowly, like a cult, words and definitions are changed, she said.

"Because if you want to control people, you have to control the way they think. And to control the way they think, you have to control their language," she said. "It's a cult that is very obsessed with language."

New phrases are created like "white privilege," "toxic masculinity," and "white fragility," she said.

Like many of her peers, she left college bringing the ideology that had framed her worldview with her.

"It gave me a lens through which to see the whole world," she said.

She called it a mutated form of Marxism that took "wealth" and replaced it with "power," and switched out the "oppressor" and the "oppressed" with the current identity groups.

Instead of distributing wealth to equalize society, the new, mutated Marxism calls for a redistribution of power among the identity groups, she explained.

"Then, everything will be utopia," she said.

Smith went into the entertainment industry, managing comedians in Los Angeles, and eventually established her own company with a co-manager in music.

"Most of the comedians I worked with were woke," she said. "They had the same belief system as me, and they talked about social justice in their comedy. I really thought, 'We're making the world a better place through laughter.'"

Smith produced a show called Totally Biased with W. Kamau Bell on FX that aired from 2012 to 2013.

"I think that was possibly one of the first overt woke late-night comedy shows," she said. "Of course, now almost all of them are overtly woke."

Behind the scenes, the woke often butted heads with the traditional left, like Chris Rock, who was an executive producer on the show.

"There was a lot of conflict between the old guard and the new guard," she said. "Writers would debate in the writer's room whether a joke was punching up or punching down."

Someone had pitched a joke about former New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie and his weight, she said, but it was ultimately decided that they couldn't use it because it was fat-shaming.

Her career in entertainment managing comedians carried on into the 2016 presidential election, when Smith said she began to see inconsistencies in the narrative.

"It wasn't a fast process," she said. "It was just as slow as it was getting into a cult. That's how slow it is getting out of a cult."

She found herself going down a rabbit hole on YouTube watching videos of Trump supporters getting attacked by people on the Left.

"There was one video where this mob surrounded this woman, a Trump supporter, and threw eggs at her," she said. "There was another where they were chasing these guys down the street and throwing bricks at them. They bloodied this guy's head. This was jarring to me."

It was during this time that Micah Johnson shot and killed five police officers and injured nine others in Dallas, Texas, after a protest organized by Next Generation Action Network in response to the killing of two black men in Louisiana and Minnesota.

Media reports were quick to say about the murders that Johnson was angry about black men getting shot by police. "And people in my social-justice echo chamber were celebrating this, making tongue-in-check remarks like,"

‘Well, some old white men are going to have to die,’” she said. “That was a shock to my system.”

Still, when Trump won, Smith admitted she was one of the people crying that night. “Then, I started to try to figure out why I didn’t see it coming,” she said. “What happened? Why did he win?”

Her initial investigation began with trying to figure out how to keep him from winning again. For the first time, she said she started listening to people on the right, interacting with their content, and watching different comedians and political commentators.

“In doing that, I started to get pushback from my cult,” she said. This came in the form of being shut down with arguments, such as, “Trump won because of racism and sexism, period,” she said.

When she interrogated the matter further, she was told her “white privilege was coming through, and you needed to sit down and shut up,” she said.

“I started to see all of these think pieces from my social justice echo chamber saying that all Trump supporters are Nazis and that we should not feel empathy toward them,” she said. “It was all very jarring and it made me start investigating what it was I really believed.”

It was about this time that she said she encountered Dr. Jordan Peterson, a clinical psychologist, best-selling author, and public speaker. Peterson is known for his lectures on personal responsibility and self-empowerment through self-searching.

“There is a lot of gaslighting that happens when you start leaving a cult in which you’re wondering, ‘Am I the only person seeing this? Is something wrong with me,’” she said. “He helped me to understand that I wasn’t crazy. He helped me put the pieces together to give words to what it was seeing in my social-justice world.”

Smith wrote him a letter, and to her surprise, he read the letter on his show, not naming Smith as the author, she said. She was still worried she would be identified, she said, being that she was still representing social justice comedians at the time.

“He told me that I needed to get over my fear, and he was right,” she said. “But getting over your fear takes a long time. It took six months, but I eventually got to the point where I was afraid of what would happen if I didn’t say something about what I was seeing around me than I was afraid what would happen if I did say something.”

She wrote an essay titled, “On Leaving the SJW Cult and Finding Myself,” which she publicly shared, leading to what she called The Great Unfriending.

“I was getting attacked online by people I thought were my friends,” she said. “There was this one feminist critic who did this whole Tweet thread about her formerly feminist friend turning into an alt-right, red pill troll.” She said one friend even attempted an ideological intervention, which failed, she said.

From there, she began Deprogrammed with Keri Smith, on which she interviewed her most recent guest, comedian Alex Stein, who’s infamous for signing up for public comment in local city council meetings, where he then takes on the character of a concerned citizen who starts off making reasonably normal statements before escalating into awkward personal confessions and belligerent rants “to make the politicians nervous.”

“It’s amazing how culturally dominant social-justice ideologies have become in the last few years,” she said. Smith said even those in the knitting world have been affected.

As documented in a series of articles by Kathrine Jebson Moore, Smith said, the ideology has infiltrated the Instagram knitting community, where a knitter in Seattle, Washington, named Karen Templer, had posted a blog about her excitement about a trip to India. Templer was attacked by a mob of people alleging that she was an imperialist and a racist who was using colonialist language, Smith explained.

Initially, her followers defended her, Smith said, but after the social-justice knitters (SJK) increased their attacks, everyone turned on her. “She offered the demanded apology, but it wasn’t good enough because it never is for social-justice warriors,” she said. It only got worse, Smith said.

Those who took a stand against the SJK got attacked themselves, accused of protecting white fragility and privilege, and banned from knitting festivals. One gay, HIV-positive knitter, Nathan Taylor, author of “Guys Knit,” posted a poem asking for kindness, Smith said, which caused the SJK to turn on him.

“He was physically confronted at one knitting convention,” she said. “Like me, he was in the social-justice world, but then he was seen as a heretic. The SJW hate those the most.”

This knitting saga made its way to the late-night platform for social-justice battle cries, The Late Show with Stephen Colbert, Smith said. On his show, Colbert did a segment on the social media site for knitters, Ravelry, which had banned Trump-supporting knitters like Deplorable Knitter who made MAGA hats, Smith said.

“He introduced the segment by saying that Ravelry issued a statement saying it was banning all white supremacy from its platform, meaning it was banning all Trump supporters,” she said. “The audience cheered for that kind of censorship. They cheered at the characterization of Trump supporters as white supremacists.”

Smith began interviewing canceled knitters who “survived the woke mob,” she said and garnered a following from the knitting community. How woke ideologies can infect even the most seemingly harmless hobby community of knitting is a testament to how pervasive the self-righteous trance can be, Smith said.

However, there is a solution, she said. “It’s on an individual level,” she said. “I think what’s driving this is individuals who are not living consciously enough to understand what they are a part of.”

“She offered the demanded apology, but it wasn’t good enough because it never is for social-justice warriors,”

The social-justice world operates on resentment and fear, Smith said. The SJW themselves are fueled by programmed anger, while those in their sphere are afraid to speak out against them, she said.

“What they are afraid of is real,” she said. “They are afraid of losing their friends, their jobs, their good name, their families, and their sense of security. All of these are very real things to be afraid of losing.”

But eventually, one must realize that there is more to fear if one doesn’t speak up, she said.

“If people don’t speak up in the early stages of an authoritarian belief system, an evil belief system—and I do call it evil—there’s going to come a time when you’re not allowed to speak at all,” she said.

Smith gets messages from people who left the social-justice world thanking her for her show because it helped them feel empowered, which she said is what Peterson did for her.

Message from an Australian Nurse...

Among all the vaccines I have known in my life (diphtheria, tetanus, measles, rubella, chickenpox, hepatitis, meningitis and tuberculosis), I want also to add flu and pneumonia, I have never seen a vaccine that forced me to wear a mask and maintain my social distance, even when you are fully vaccinated.

I had never heard of a vaccine that spreads the virus even after vaccination.

I had never heard of rewards, discounts or incentives to get vaccinated. I never saw discrimination against those who didn't. If you haven't been vaccinated no one has tried to make you feel like a bad person. I have never seen a vaccine that threatens the relationship between family, colleagues and friends.

I have never seen a vaccine used to threaten livelihoods, work or school. I have never seen a vaccine that would allow a 12-year-old to override parental consent. After all the vaccines I listed above, I have never seen a vaccine like this one, which discriminates, divides and judges society as it is. And as the social fabric tightens...it's a powerful vaccine! It does all these things except immunization.

If we still need a booster dose after we are fully vaccinated, and we still need to get a negative test after we are fully vaccinated, and we still need to wear a mask after we are fully vaccinated, and still be hospitalized after we have been fully vaccinated, it will likely come to the point where it's time for us to admit that we've been completely deceived."

New Studies Show Link Between Incurable, Degenerative Brain Disease and the Experimental Covid-19 Vaccine

By Julia Conradson; June 5, 2022

Two new clinical studies – one peer-reviewed by researchers in Turkey, and one pre-print by researchers in France – have begun to establish an alarming link between an incurable, degenerative brain disease called Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (CJD) and the experimental Covid-19 vaccine.

CJD is a "rare" disease that is caused by abnormal infectious proteins in the brain called "prions," according to NHS. Although the presence of prions is not necessarily dangerous or deadly, the proteins will cause degenerative brain damage if they become diseased or misfolded. Once this process begins, the malfunctioning prions will continue to corrupt other cells, leading to a prognosis that is always fatal.

As of right now, CJD is uncurable. There are zero treatment options available. The diagnosis is essentially a death sentence, but symptoms are traditionally dormant for several years before manifesting into a deadly complication.

Unfortunately, with the new cases of CJD that have been linked to the vaccine, that doesn't seem to be the case. The disease is progressing at an alarming and unprecedented rate. So much so that the team of French researchers highlighted their concerns of the experimental mRNA vaccines contributing directly to creating a new, more aggressive type of CJD.

According to the French study, a total of 26 cases of vaccine-linked CJD were included in the research.

At the time of the study's publication, a whopping 20 out of the 26 CJD patients had already passed away from the disease. Additionally, researchers found that there were "more than 50 cases" of the fatal disease that appeared after taking the experimental vaccines.

Despite traditionally taking as much as a decade to manifest with symptoms, the study found symptoms in these new cases began appearing just 11.38 days post-vaccination. In these cases, the disease is killing the affected individuals in under 5 months' time (4.76 months).

From the French pre-print:

“...we are analyzing the concomitance of cases, which occurred in various European countries, between the first doses of Pfizer or Moderna mRNA vaccine and the sudden and rapid onset of the first symptoms of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, which usually requires several years before observing its first symptoms...”

...We subsequently recall the usual history of this dreadful subacute disease, and compare it with this new, extremely acute, prion disease, following closely vaccinations. In a few weeks, more 50 cases of almost spontaneous emergence of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease have appeared in France and Europe very soon after the injection of the first or second dose of Pfizer, Moderna or AstraZeneca vaccines.”

Researchers were also able to identify the probable cause of the sudden-onset CJD post-vaccination. When the vaccines were first synthesized, the genetic makeup was based on the original strain of the virus that came out of the Wuhan Institute of Virology – which had a prion region on its spike protein.

This spike protein and prion region in the experimental mRNA has been shown to interact with human cells and is the likely culprit for the more aggressive version of CJD, according to the French pre-print.

“At the time of the study’s publication, a whopping 20 out of the 26 CJD patients had already passed away from the disease.”

From The Epoch Times:

“...when the Wuhan variant’s spike protein gene information was made into a vaccine as part of the mRNA and adenovirus vaccines, the prion region was also incorporated.

As part of the natural cellular process, once the mRNA is incorporated into the cells, the cell will turn the mRNA instructions into a COVID-19 spike protein, tricking the cells into believing that it has been infected so that they create an immunological memory against a component of the virus...

A U.S. study has speculated that a misfolded spike protein could in turn create a misfolded prion region that may be able to interact with healthy prions to cause damage, leading to CJD disease.”

Published just before the French study, the peer-reviewed paper out of Turkey also identified sudden CJD cases appearing after getting any of the experimental Pfizer, Moderna, and AstraZeneca vaccines. However, instead of taking over 11 days on average for symptoms to appear, the researchers found the disease is showing up 10x quicker – a single day after vaccination.

From the peer-reviewed study:

Reports of neurological problems are increasing for the clinical presentation of COVID19...

...Creutzfeldt–Jakob disease, a spongiform encephalopathy caused by prions, is characterized by a severe neurological destruction, which has an extremely high mortality. In this publication, we presented a patient who was admitted to the Pamukkale University Anesthesiology Intensive Care Units with the neurological findings that developed after the COVID-19 vaccine (CoronaVac, Sinovac Life Sciences, Beijing, China). The patient died due to the progressive neurological disorders...

...The onset of acute neurological symptoms after Covid19 vaccination suggested that there might be an adverse effect related to the vaccine. Suppression of immunity after vaccination may have accelerated the emergence of prion disease or the onset of the disease may be coincidental. In order for CJD diagnosis to be associated with the vaccine, the cause-effect relationship between them must be revealed. Therefore, further studies are needed in this area.”

In the end, researchers (rightfully) called for more research to be conducted into this issue – Well that’s exactly what the team of French researchers did, and according to one of the main authors of that study – Dr. Jean-Claude Perez – the new findings confirm the worst – there is a new, more aggressive form of CJD.

From Dr. Perez:

“This confirms the radically different nature of this new form of CJD, whereas the classic form requires several decades.”

Add CJD to the list of mRNA vaccine horrors. We are really running out of room.

World Economic Forum Says It Is 'Time to Look Beyond' Private Vehicle Ownership

The World Economic Forum (WEF) published a paper last week calling for the end of “wasteful” private car ownership. The WEF argued that communal sharing of cars would lessen global demands for precious metals and fossil fuels.

COVID. Alright? These people have access to all of this information. They know because they can read the documents you can't read. They know because they can see the testimony under oath. They can see that Ben Rhodes, Susan Rice's deputy national security advisor under Obama, is saying a different thing under oath to what he was saying in the media. The same with John Brennan, head of the CIA. The same with James Clapper, head of the DNI, and so on, and so on, and so on; you just keep going on down the line. So think about what that means, I knew General McMaster very, very well. I was on the ground with his troops in Tele Fan in northern Iraq when they fought Al Qaeda to wrestle that city out of the hand of Al Qaeda. I was on the battlefield with him, Tele Fan one of the most bleak, brutal places in whole of Iraq. Extraordinary violence what you saw there, it was terrible what was done to the people. When H.R. McMaster went in with the 3rd Cavalry, he didn't want me on the front line. We went up to one of the tanks, and he made me promise I wouldn't get out in the battle until he gave me the say-so in the battle... And of course, he slow rolled me. So I remember eventually just grabbing the uniform of the gunner and climbing up him and using him as a rope and leaping out the turret of the tank that way because that's what you have to do when people want to stand in your way preventing and standing in your way of seeing the truth. YOU have to go out and find it.

We live in an age where people trusted our leaders. We trusted and had faith in our institutions, and we trusted our media. So we thought, we know politicians lie, and media gets it wrong or they are biased. We get all of that. What we didn't understand was that everything that we believed in was an illusion. We learned we didn't really count because both sides are deciding for us. They are selecting our leaders, they are selecting the winners and the losers, and sadly even the losers are in on it a lot of the time... not always, of course, you can always find exceptions. But an astonishing number are in on it. People are paid not to run. What is that? That's the same thing. People are compensated in other ways. If they just hold back on their campaign a little. It's a dead give-away when you see Hillary Clinton not campaigning in 2016. That she doesn't actually think she needs to work to win. Well why is that? Because the fix is in, Right?

That's why they didn't want Donald Trump as much as they didn't want him. Because this idea that is enshrined in the constitution, that the government belongs to all of you... that you the people ARE the government. THIS is a uniquely American idea. And I know that because having grown up without it, I'm constantly amazed that the power that the Bill of Rights really gives you to have ownership of the country around you. And then I'm shocked how willingly you're sacrificing it. I don't understand why. Why would you do that? Look where you've come.

More than 40 states have been erased from the culture and the history of this country. People don't bother with them, they're just fly over country, or the racist south. When I lived in D.C. and we were moving to Texas, people were stunned, [saying] why would you go live in redneck country? I have one of my best friends who happens to be black, she won't come visit me. She said, "Hell no, I'm not going down there, they'll lynch me." Really?! Really. That's what you think of Texas TODAY! My family from South Africa didn't want to come visit me in Texas. One, because they thought there was nothing of value there. Nothing. Nothing worth seeing, nothing worth doing, nothing worth experiencing, nothing worth learning about, and on top of that THIS was the home of terrible people. We have done that to ourselves because we have allowed it to happen, and that is on us.

So that's a question you have to ask yourself, what you're going to do about that, and how you're going to do it. People always want me to give them answers. I'm a journalist, that's not my job, I'm not a specialist. I don't know this city, I don't know the country even as well as you do.

That's for you to decide, but my job is to understand and search for the truth, and to break down the obstacles in my way and there are many obstacles today. I no longer care what they write about me because I don't understand how anyone cares what a paper that reports thousands of stories that are wrong. Think about that. Every time you Google something and you go to the NYT website or the Washington Post website, you are literally going someplace where thousands of stories have been wrong. They don't want to you listen to people like me. They don't want you to respect my work. But they want you to bow at the altar of newspapers and television programs who year after year after year, story after story, have lied. And we do it. WHY?

If the Federal Government is destroying everything you've ever believed in, if they are failing to uphold the law, failing to secure the borders, if they are failing in their duties as defined in constitution, why are you paying taxes to them? Why?

You know what we are all doing? What we are all doing? We are going like lambs to the slaughter. Who finances the monopoly of Facebook? Where does their money come from? [From] All of you. Not just your data, it's your content. What is the effort it takes to post something on Facebook? Or the effort that is taken to photographs from here and there, and to share things, and whatever else? It takes time. For some people it takes creativity. If you're advertising, it takes your money. You're paying to advertise. "Oh my business won't survive." "I can give up Facebook, but I can't give up Instagram." Find another way because what you're doing is feeding the hand that is slitting your throat. As they are sawing threw the layers.

And I use a graphic example like that because this is like a beheading, right? There is no coming back from this. You're not going to go from teaching every white kid in America that they are inherently unconsciously racist and that there is nothing of value or merit in their history and their DNA. Where do you think you go from there? To a better place? A better country? Where you've got little girls being raised as little boys at the age of four. That's being celebrated with ceremonies in their schools. Where you've got parents literally posting online about how they are having to bribe their kids and how difficult it was forcing their child to submit to these hormone blockers and medical treatments. And you're doing what about it? What are you doing about it?

I don't know about you, but my children haven't had a vacation for more than 2 years. There's no day that I wake up thinking about whether I'm going to get my nails done, maybe hang out with a few friends, go to the beach. I don't live like that. I haven't lived like that for a very long time. My husband doesn't live like that. He's a pain in the ass to be quite frank. Because when I'm not obsessing, he is. It is relentless in our household. How many of you are living like that? Because once you see the reality in front of you...

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

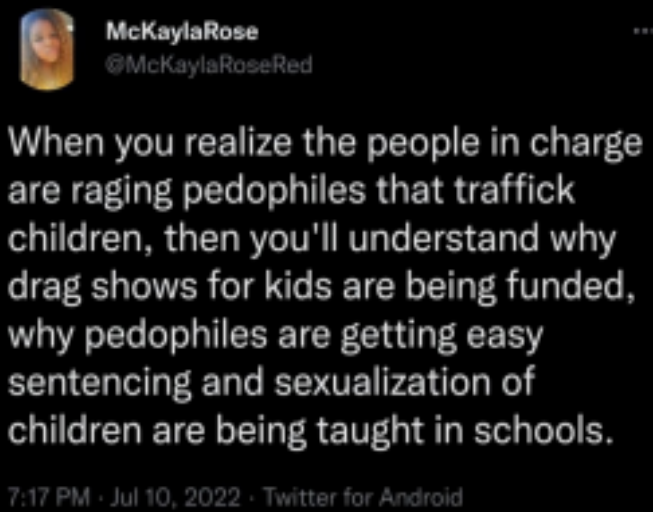

Hello Dear Readers, We're at that point in the war where fatigue and irritability have set in. Our hope is waning and we fear the worst is yet to come for our great nation. But this is also that time in the war where we shower up, take a nap and get back in the fight. I've been away for a bit. I am struggling with issues of my own, not the least of which the cost of printing this work of passion and patriotism has doubled since last we met. I am determined to keep the paper going and while it pains me to have to ask for help, I recognize that my struggle can be someone else's chance to be a part of the fight. On page 3 I have published your voice of truth amidst the shadows of evil in the media we know today. I have high hopes that we will once again revere journalism as a source of truth, and not the governmental arm of propaganda.

Should you wish to receive printed copies of the Patriot Press, you can add your address to the donation memo and I will ensure copies are mailed out for you to share.

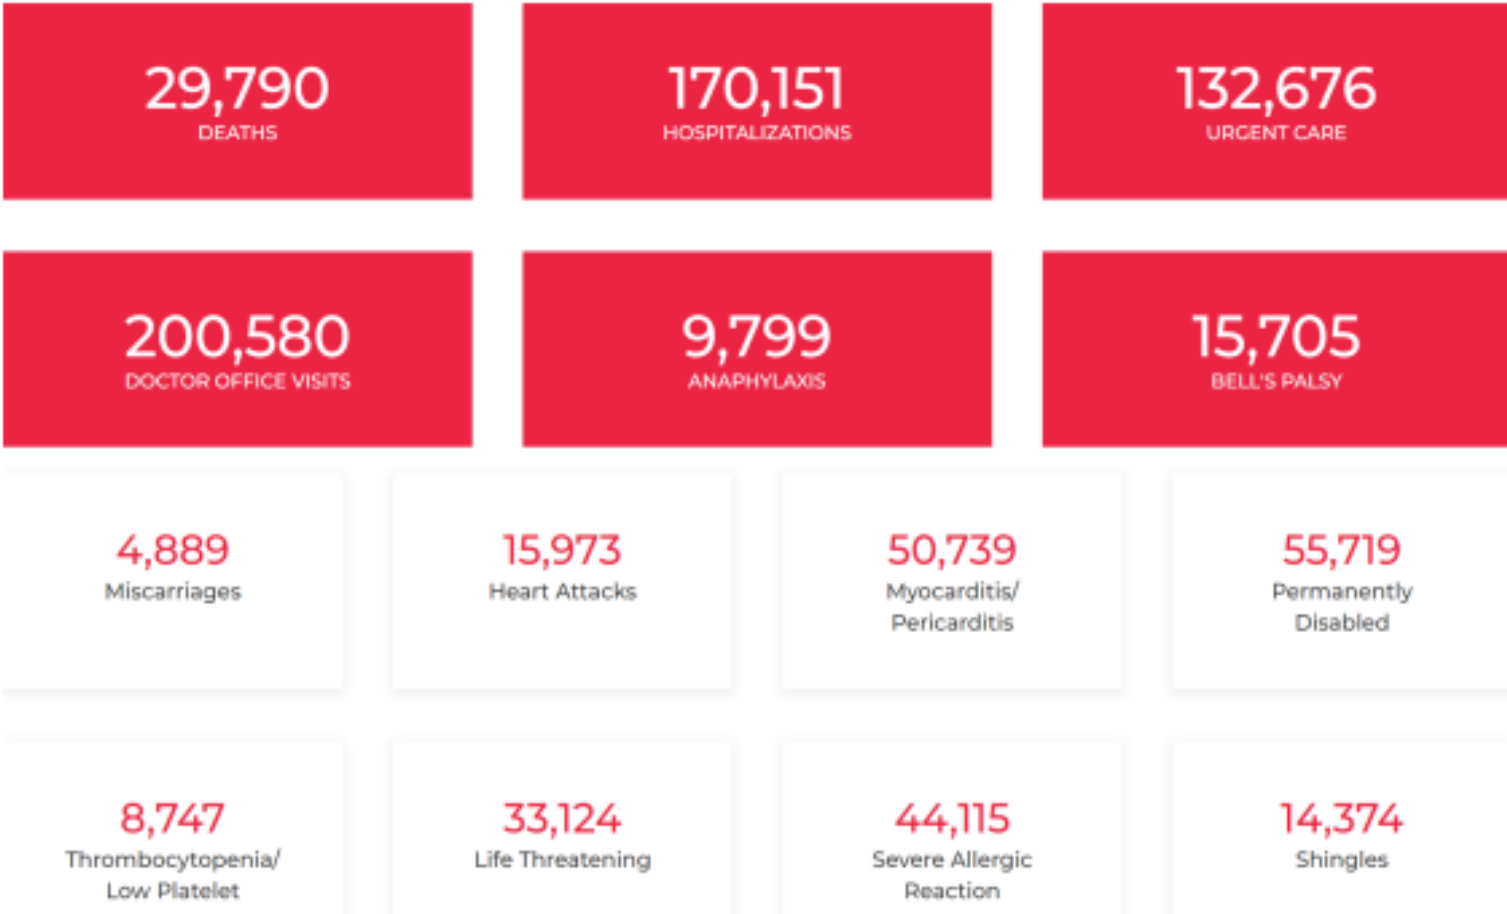

I wish each and every one of you God-speed and God Bless. Stay in the fight Patriots. NOTHING is more important than protecting our Land of the Brave for we are One Nation Under God!

Do you really think that when you have an administration establishing a ministry of disinformation inside the Department of Homeland Security that you are not on the edge of the precipice? Does anyone not see? You know, I felt the frustration of being able to see truth around you and not being able to get that out.

The frustration of knowing Mike Flynn for 20 years, seeing him targeted and presented to the world as a liar; one lie after another that was written about him. The NYT even wrote that he, as the national security director, quoting people that were in meetings with him, that he didn't even know how to deploy the National Guard or what had to happen for weapons sales had to be approved by congress. The man was the head of the Defense Intelligence Agency. The head of the Defense Intelligence Agency, which was set up to do what? To track every weapon that America ever makes, and every weapon that every country in the world has. He oversees the only agency created for that purpose. Do you really think General Flynn didn't know that weapons sales has to be approved by congress? So you've got one moron, or political operative writing that story.... How many morons and political operatives at the NYT have to vet that story and edit it and then copy edit it, and then send it for printing, and then put it out. And NOBODY CARED.

I would email the whole of CBS. I would use the taglines that went to every employee in the company and just factually [point out] this is the job Defense Intelligence Agency. This is the man who ran it. It is not possible for him not to have known this information. Don't fall for the fake reporting. What happens? It's on the CBS news that night. So you stand there, and all you're trying to do is tell the truth, and the next thing you know.... [whispers] "Oh my God, is she a Trump supporter?" And how many of you ran from Trump because you didn't want that Charlottesville white supremacy narrative attached. Right? Who does? Nobody thinks racism is a good thing. I've fought all my life against racism. It's the one thing they haven't been able to say about me... so far! Right? But don't let the truth stand in the way of a good story. So, it's inevitable that it will be attached at some point.

I say this to you because if you look at where we are now, what is really at the heart of where we are now? The false narrative on Climate Change is now becoming very obvious. You're going to have smart appliances, smart dishwashers, smart thermostat, smart this, smart that... All of which allows what you do in your daily life to be monitored and controlled. So now in the interest of "climate" you won't be able to run your dishwasher as many times you want in a day, or take as many showers as you want in a day; or whether you bath or shower will be determined by somebody else. They will have the ability to do, and it's fascinating to see how we're always told that they have the "ability" but they're not going to use it. Oh! That's right, so CISA, remember the government agency that said "the most secure election in history"... CISA now says, Oh we have identified that the machines are NOT secure, However, don't worry, you're going to be thrilled to hear this part, there's no evidence that any of those vulnerabilities were exploited. - CISA has never looked at the evidence, so how would they know?

Who is CISA? Who makes up CISA? Who sits on the board? Let's see they have representatives from Dominion Voting Machines, ES&S, SmartMatic, Clarity Elections, Erik... I mean there's no government employees on that board. It's the voting machine companies, it's the vendors, it's the research companies, it's the NGOs who all participated in stealing the election. They're all represented on CISA. So is it a surprise that they declared it the most secure election in history? It was their election. It was their work they were grading. So, where is that a failure of? That's a failure of the journalists reporting to you because it's their job to say, when that happens, when you know you have a contested result. If you recognize the millions of people who voted for Trump as anything other than "Deplorables", homophobic, racists, Islamophobic, and so on, then you would have to recognize that there is a reason to ask that question. But if none of those people matter, if none of these states matter, then you don't even factor it in. You just manipulate it and reduce it to that political construct that serves your political intent.

This is, for all of us.... This is the End Game. That's what we're in right now. The End Game. Right? I look around at young people today and I'm like, Wow! You're like Dead men walking. You're worried that someone at college might find out you're a conservative. - THAT'S your biggest fear? That's your biggest fear. You're tiptoeing around and then you're thinking about getting drunk at Jaspers. Really? Because you don't have a future. You don't have a future, literally. And that is why it matters that young people stand up. That's why it's so important. If you ever have uttered the words, "I don't mind if they're spying on me, I'm not doing anything wrong. We have no privacy anyway." The last time I checked, the Constitution was still there. What they want is for you not to fight for it. They want you to accept that the FBI is corrupt and unsalvageable, same with the state department, same with the CIA, same with the media. Why? Because if you burn it to the ground, they don't have to. It's a lot easier to just break your spirit. It's a lot easier to crush your hope. It's a lot easier to convince you that you have no chance. And every day that you go silent, because you don't want it to come home to you, you don't want it to come down to this, or that... you don't want to not be invited somewhere. You don't want to be treated like people have been treated since Trump was elected.

How many people didn't vote for Trump because they just wanted him to go away. They thought we could just go back to the way it was before, when Democrats and Republican's in D.C. were both sort of celebrated and people fawned all over both sides. You could get a prime table in D.C. if you were a powerful lobbyist for whoever. People thought they could go back to those days. I tried to tell them when Trump was there that there was no going back. This was never about Trump. They used Trump's personality and demeanor and style, his abrasive style to obscure the fact of who was really under assault. Who was the real target? What was the Russia Conspiracy really about? Removing from office and incapacitating a legally elected administration. Because the plan to subvert it had failed. The plan to cheat had failed.

"So, we, right now, sit at the gates of Auschwitz"

So, we, right now, sit at the gates of Auschwitz, because the world has had many attempts to take it over. We've had doctrines like Marxism that have taken over many countries, but what is different today? Technology, which changes everything. Facebook reaches 3.5 billion people on the planet. When you combine that with Twitter, how many people do they reach?

When you combine that with Google, and it now becomes who do they NOT reach? Why do you have the same conversations in Brazil today, as you do in Moscow, as you do in Paris? Because the narrative is being set and controlled through the same technology. So, what you really have, when you look at that technology, is you have One World already. What you have in this Administration, are people implementing the policies and the principles of that Global Government. Google today will no longer present to you the world as it is, they present you with the world as they believe it should be, or as they want it to be. If I search Nigeria, Obama, Visa Changes and what do I get? I get a litany of articles about how great Biden's immigration policies are, and a few articles interspersed with how terrible Trumps were. – I didn't search Biden or Trump, but that's what Google gave me, because they are determining what the world looks like for us. So, there's censorship on the one hand, and there's manipulation of the information. What happens when the books that they have banned, no longer physically exist?

We're in the midst of a book burning. Kash Patel, National Security appointee of the Trump administration who worked with Devin Nunes, who's coming out boldly about Durham and the Russia Collusion. He wrote a children's book. Google just banned it. So what are you doing to preserve the books that you know are important for our kids. My friend April and I are fighting a battle in our little town in Texas over what books they put in the libraries. They tell you it's not porn, in fact the local people in our town put a big advert in the newspaper in our town saying that there's not porn, it's made up. It's a lie. It's just a fringe group of alt-right lunatics who are pushing this lie and there's nothing to see here, move on. April's own mother said, what are you doing?

I said, why don't we ask the local newspapers, we're just going to run excerpts from these books. We're not going to put a message or anything. Well, what do you think the local newspaper said? We can't run that... it's a family newspaper. Oh but it's your wife who is running those one page adverts calling all of us liars. Who's paying for all those adverts? The DNC in Gillespie County. Where is the DNC in Gillespie County getting their strategy and funding? From the DNC. What is the GOP doing about it? Nothing. What is the GOP doing to support the parents who are fighting it? Nothing. Absolutely Nothing! So what does that tell you? Well, I'm way past the time that I think that is just a failure of leadership. It's not.

It's by design.

When you read those excerpts, what is consistent in everyone of them: it's always sex of course, but it's graphic, (really graphic) and it always involves some white boy on the football team raping one of the schoolgirls. So it consistently reinforces this narrative that white men truly are the source of all evil in our society. As mothers and sisters and wives and friends, we shouldn't allow that. As white men yourselves, and one of the reason's Ross is standing up, is because he's not like that and he's not going to take that. You have to fight for yourselves. I don't see enough white men standing up and saying, you know what, that is not true. In fact, I barely see any, and shame on you. Shame on you all because you are making it harder for my son who doesn't have a prejudice bone in his body. He's growing up having to prove to everybody that he is not racist, and he's not a rapist, and he's not a misogynist and so on. It's on us when we allow those narratives to exist. Every time you hear them, you should stand up against them in whatever way that you can; just the way that actually many black people are standing up against the false narratives there. Many people don't see every white person as a racist, and they are standing up and fighting. They are one of the most active communities fighting.

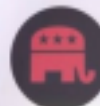

What about all the gay people who don't think the whole trans movement is OK. Who don't think that children should be getting beta blockers at age 4-5-6? Or should be allowed to do that behind their parents backs. There's a ton of gay people who are trying to stand up, and you know what happens to them? They get attacked and they get intimidated, and they get silenced because we allow it to happen and we don't stand up to the tactics. I am just here to tell you there are a million things that you can do in your daily life. You can do them in your homes. You can do them with your family and friends. You can do them at work. You don't have to wait. You can be the business that when Disney is doing this, or State Farm is endorsing treatment for transgender kids and so on, that you're the business that says, you know what, we don't believe in that. If you don't believe in that, shop with us. Because I'm tired of it. I don't want to feed Jeff Besos, but then you go shop at Target and they cancel all their Back the Blue events at Christmastime... and now they've opened a line of gender suppression underwear where girls and boys can strap everything down and pretend to be something they're not.

Look what Biden just did on infrastructure, not the Infrastructure Bill, but what he just introduced for building codes. They are changing all of that because the goal is no private ownership of land. No private ownership at all. That's what the World Economic Forum has told us. By 2030, you will never have owned less and been happier. And what is the model for that, that we already see in action? Subscriptions. Have you ever lost your debit card, or had it expire, or has anyone in this room ever run out of money? [When that happens] You don't have access to Apple TV. You don't have access to Netflix or Spotify. You don't have something you bought like a record that you can put on the record player and listen to music. You can't watch TV. You can't watch movies. You can't do anything, because you rent everything. Without a viable bankcard. You can't do anything at all. You already own less. You're only happy as long as you have access to that money that keeps that model and that system going. Now, we're going into a cashless society. Cash is our independence. Once everything is digital, if you're a doctor, or Ross is a lawyer. Your lawyer degree doesn't mean anything if they can just erase it. How will we know? Will 1984 still end the same way if no one has a physical copy of the book?

The first amendment, as probably everyone in this room knows is first for a reason. Its first because it guarantees all the other amendments. So once you have this assault on the first amendment, as you look throughout history, it never leads to free societies. It's never an endorsement or a strengthening to a free society, it is? It's always a precursor to a more tyrannical society.

We hear a lot about Marxism and Communism and that has a very significant role to play because anyone can see the tactics of Marxism and Communism at play. But what I think many people miss, is that Marxism and Communism are as much about control of the one side [the Left, if you like] as it is anything else. Just the way that the way the Right is being sought to be controlled through censorship and other things. Why? Because in order to take over a society and to remake the world in the image that these people want you need to control both sides of the narrative. So you will see, for example, some very recent and very powerful examples of how they are doing that.

You had the Supreme Court leak on Roe vs. Wade. What did that do? That got the Left all fired up, right? That's got Antifa out on the streets. That's got protests and demonstrations, and people all over the world reacting. Well, what do you have then on the Right? Now you have gun control, Uvalde and so on, and so now the Right is occupied with defending the second amendment. And what are we not paying attention to? We're really not paying attention to the largest criminal conspiracy in the history of this country. Which was what?

Actually, it was Russia Collusion. The largest, criminal seditious conspiracy ever in the history of the United States. Why do I say that? Well, look who it involved? Not just the head of the CIA, or the head of the FBI, or the head of Counter-Intelligence for the FBI... and by the way all of their deputies, and also the president, and the vice president, and national security advisor, and the DNI, the head of the National Intelligence before you even start going down the chain to people that were hired [like] Brian Joffe's company that were hired to manage the secret, classified communications of the White House. Of the President of the United States. That they were taking that information off the servers and feeding it Perkins-Coie and Infusion GPS. Unfortunately, and perhaps one of the most revealing parts of it all, is that not one single republican who was in power alongside Trump did anything about it. Put yourself in the position of the National Security Advisor, or whether your Christopher Wray, now appointed by Trump in the wake of

THE UNVACCINATED WILL BE VINDICATED

By Jomo Thomas ; Fri, Jun 24, 2022

Twenty-seven months after the World Health Organization announced that the world was gripped by a 'deadly' Covid pandemic, views and opinions vary as to who was right or wrong and whether science was sacrificed in the quest to pollute the peoples' minds, and bend their will for motives other than health and safety of the world's population.

We quoted extensively from a column written by Susan Dunham, a vaccinated Australian journalist whose opinion is worthy of consideration.

"If Covid were a battlefield, it would still be warm with the bodies of the unvaccinated."

Thankfully the mandates are letting up, and both sides of the war stumble back to the new normal.

The unvaccinated are the heroes of the last two years as they allowed us all to have a control group in the great experiment, and highlight the shortcoming of the Covid vaccines.

The unvaccinated carry many battle scars and injuries as they are the people we tried to mentally break, yet no one wants to talk about what we did to them and what they forced 'The Science' to unveil.

We knew that the waning immunity of the fully vaccinated had the same risk profile as others within society, as the minority of the unvaccinated; yet we marked them for special persecution.

We said they had not 'done the right thing for the greater good' by handing their bodies and medical autonomy over to the State.

Many of the so-called health experts and political leaders admitted the goal was to make life almost unlivable for the unvaccinated, which was multiplied many times by the collective mob, with the fight taken into workplaces, friendships, and family gatherings.

Today, the hard truth is none of it was justified as we took a quick slide from righteousness to absolute cruelty.

We might blame our leaders and health experts for the push, but each individual within society must be held accountable for stepping into the well-laid-out trap.

We did this despite knowing full well that principled opposition is priceless when it comes to what goes inside our bodies, and we let ourselves be tricked into believing that going into another ineffective lockdown would be the fault of the unvaccinated and not the fault of the toxic policy of ineffective vaccines.

We took pleasure in scapegoating the unvaccinated because after months of engineered lockdowns by political leaders blinded by power, having someone to blame and to burn at the stake, felt good.

We believed we had logic, love, and truth on our side, so it was easy to wish death upon the unvaccinated.

Those of us who ridiculed and mocked the non-compliant did it because we were embarrassed by their courage and principles and didn't think the unvaccinated would make it through unbroken, and we turned the holdouts into punching bags.

{Fauci, Rachele Walensky, Biden, Caribbean Ayatollah Gonsalves, unvaccinated spittle Camillo Gonsalves, Gaston Browne, Stop Jack assing yoself Keith Rowley} and the other cast in prominent roles need to be held to account for vilifying the unvaccinated in public and fueling angry social media mobs.

The mobs, the mask Nazis, and the vaccine disciples have been embarrassed by 'betting against' the unvaccinated because mandates only had the power we gave them.

It was not compliance that ended domination by Big Pharma Companies, Bill Gates and his many organizations, and the World Economic Forum... It was THANKS to the people we tried to embarrass, ridicule, mock and tear down.

We should all try and find some inner gratitude for the unvaccinated as we took the bait by hating them because their perseverance and courage bought us the time to see we were wrong.

So, if mandates ever return for Covid or any other disease or virus, hopefully, more of us will be awake and see the rising authoritarianism that has no concern for our well-being and is more about power and control.

The War on the Unvaccinated was lost, and we should all be very thankful for that.

Susan Dunham addressed the situation from the point of view of those who fell for the hypnotic command to despise anyone - friends and family included - who refused to buy the official narrative about the covid shots.

Remarkably, even now, with everything we know about the jabs, the war against the unvaccinated continues, and while compassion is slowly making a comeback, ignorance of the basics still abounds.

Recently, Los Angeles Times columnist Michael Hiltzik told CNN, 'many of them have promoted reckless, dangerous policies and took innocent people along with them. Every one of those deaths is a teachable moment; unfortunately, we haven't been learning the lessons... How should we react to the death of the unvaxxed? A hallmark of civilized thought is that all life is precious. However, those who have deliberately flouted medical advice by refusing a vaccine known to reduce the risk of serious disease from the virus, including risk to others, and end up in a hospital or the grave can be viewed as receiving their just deserts.'

Miltzik has not yet experienced the moment of clarity experienced by Dunham. Instead, he insists, 'Mocking the anti-vaxxer is ghoulish but necessary.'

Some like Dunham recognize the fallacy in their thinking and call for change. Others, like Hiltzik, have been brainwashed by FearPorn. They cannot connect the dots and see that a vaccine that does not prevent infection or spread can never protect others.

Hence, those who get the jab have no advantage over those who don't. Both pose the same risk to others. And, if both pose the same risk, why target one for insult and not the other. It is beyond irrational, but such is the mind of those under the hypnotic spell. They are incapacitated in the worst of ways, unable to see the reality.

Will enough people learn the lesson of humility that Dunham highlights? Have enough recognized the error of their ways, or will they fall into the same trap again? Only time will tell. But remember this; first, they came for the vaccinated. You may be next.
